Whenever Cauvee says something and I decide to put it into practice, it brings great results, whether or not it made sense at first. Case in point, my close ratio when I started was 12%. After about 6 months, it was at 22%, probably at or slightly above the average rep in my company. Today, my close ratio from the last couple months is 30.2%!! I just had my best month ever, more than double my average month between 6 and 15 months ago. My ability to turn work into results is drastically better than it was a year ago, and I am stoked for 2017.

FOUNDER

Cauvéé pronounced [kaw-vay] is an Inspiration Engineer with quite a unique story. Unlike most success stories, Cauvéé had success early on. He began his journey as a musician by the name of R-tistic. This rapper-producer combo became locally famous for selling out his high school auditorium at a headlined and self-promoted concert of 1,209 people.

Unfortunately for Cauvéé, his high school was not willing to compensate this achievement. While attempting to replicate his success at Ball State University, his sophomore concert flopped. Selling 333 tickets out of 3,500, sending him spiraling into debt and depression.

Cauvéé never quit. Acquiring skills from some of the biggest corporate brands while actively pursuing his dreams, this is how the entrepreneur was born.

While in school full time, launching an entertainment company and serving as an Enrollment Counselor at the University of Phoenix, he helped a young woman graduate with an Associates Degree. Which explains where his passion to help others find fulfillment began.

Cauvéé has since transitioned into lifestyle coach, teaching one of his first pupils the principle of Relationship Acquisition® aka sales at Cauvee Creative. This student became #1 sales rep at Zillow a $648M company and breaking 6 figures in revenue.

Cauvéé is also a Contributor for Huffington Post and Influencive.

Q: What's an Inspiration Engineer?
